Soviet Expert On Space Gets Asylum in U.K.

By John M. Lee

LONDON; June 20 (NYT) .- Anatol Fedoseyev, a Russian space expert who disappeared from his Paris hotel May 27, has asked and been granted permission to stay in Britain, government officials announred today. They added that Mr. Fedoseyev, who had gone to Paris to attend the oir show there, is in this country now.

The Russian, 52, had been described in Paris as a vice-minister in charge of the Soviet Union's space research. He was said to have been particularly involved in the Luna program's robot exploration of the moon and in the current Soyuz-Salyut space station work.

As such, he would be one of the highest ranking Russians to defect to the West

A spokesman for the Russian Embassy in London, Nicolai Blesbanov, refused to confirm the scientist's identification and said: "We don't know anything about the whereabouts of Mr. Fedoseyev. Everybody's off." Western dipiomats in Moscow said that Mr. Fedoseyev was un-

Post Prepares Plea Against Injunction

By Sanford Ungar

WASHINGTON, June 20 (WP) .- The Washington Post suspended publication yesterday of a series of articles based on a secret Pentagon study of the origins of the Vietnam war, after a federal appeals court earlier yesterday issued a temporary restraining order pending a full hearing tomorrow on whether the articles could endanger national security.

Attorneys for The Post said last night that they would not seek reversal of the U.S. Court of Appeals decision from Chief Justice Warren E. Burger "at this time."

Instead, they said that they would prepare tes timony for the hearing on the government's request for an injunction against The Post, which U.S. District Court Judge Gerbard A. Gesen scheduled for 8 a.m. tomorrow.

Judge Gesell. who bad ruled Friday night that The Post could continue with its series, is working under a court of appeals order that be conclude his bearing and make a decision by 5 p.m. tomorrow. The Post decision not to appeal to the Supreme Court was made only after the newspaper learned yesterday that a judge on the Second Circuit Court of Appeals in New York had delayed until noon tomorrow a decision on whether a similar series of articles can appear in The New York Times.

The Justice Department has contended that the articles in both newspapers—based on a 47-volume study entitled "History of U.S. Decision-Making Process on Vietnam Policy"—could result in "ir-reparable injury" to the defense interests of the United States.

But both newspapers have argued against that contention and claim that the constitutional right of freedom of the press is at stake.

Judge Gesell, after summoning lawyers for the government and The Post to his chambers yesterday morning to arrange the bearing tomorrow, said that he would spend today studying the majority and dissenting opinions of the appeals court here, which were issued last night. Writing for himself and Judge Roger Robb, Appellate Judge Spotiswood W. Robinson 3d said, in the opinion restraining The Post, that "freedom of the press, as important as it is, is not boundless."

He asserted that the government should have an opportunity to prove its ollega-tions that the series of articles in The Post would endanger na-tional security.

decision in the Court of Appeals tomorrow. Judge Gurfein laced his 16-page opinion with references to the need for a free press as a "safety valve" in "troubled times," but he dealt his severest blow to the Justice Department injunction suit by dismissing pleas of an imminent military and diplomatic "disaster."

Upholds N.Y. Times

By John P. MacKenzie NEW YORK, June 20 (WP) —A federal judge held yesterday that publication of the Pentagon's

Vietnam war history would cause only "some embarrassment" and no danger to the government. But an appellate judge blocked The New York Times from printing it at least until tomorrow. Judge Murray I, Gurfein, finding that even the government's secret evidence proved no more than

Despite a four-hour closed session Friday that gave the government "an opportunity to pinpoint what it believed to be vital breaches to our national security," he said, "no cogent reasons were advanced as to why these documents-except in the general framework of embarrassment-vitally affect the security of the nation." Judge Gurfein said that he had the power to block publishing of the most seriously detrimental information in wartime or other emergency-a point conceded by The Times in theory-but that the government simply failed to produce enough evidence to raise "the delicate question" of when to use that power.

He said that the government's claim had an especially heavy burden in light of "the com-pelling force" of First Amendment press freedoms. The judge wrote:

"If there be some embarrassment to the government in security aspects as remote as the general, embarrassment that Nixon Says Primary Concern

TOKYO, June 20 (AP).—A Northwest-Orient 747 jumbo jet had what was described as a "minor mishap" during an attempted takeoif here for San Francisco late tonight. There were no injuries among the 308 passengers and 11 crew members aboard.

Officials said the plane had traveled 1,640 feet on a wet runway when one side of the landing gear collapsed, scraping the portside wing and engines on the sphalt. They called the damage to the aircraft not serious.

Passengers were taken to Tokyo hotels for the night and were expected to depart on another Northwest-Orient 747 tomorrow. The accident was only the sec-

"This is a sad day for America," Judge Wright wrote at the start of his attack on his colleagues' decision in the government's fovor. He complained that the Justice Department allegations about The Post articles had been "vague" and insubstantial.

The three appeals judges debated for three hours over their decision in The Post case early yesterday morning, although attorney Roger Clark, representing the newspaper, had warned them that the presses would be rolling with editions containing the second installment in The Post series moments after their 35minute hearing concluded.

By the time the order restraining The Post had been issued. a considerable number of copies of yesterday's newspaper had already been printed. The second installment of the Vietnam series had also been distributed to the 325 clients of the Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service.

The federal criminal law, which the government said was the prime source of its right to an injunction, specifies that an accused "willfully" communicate classified information which be

By comparison, the increase in 12 years between 1952 and the 1964 was only 43 percent. The jump in the cost of getting clected reflected the enormous cost of television, the fact that both major parties had presidential primary contests and the candidacies of two multimillionaires -the late Robert F. Kennedy and

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller. The cost per vote was 60 cents, also a record. Those are the conclusions of the most extensive survey of campalgn spending ever undertaken. It was carried out by the Citi zens' Research Foundation of Princeton, N.J., and is detailed in "Financing the 1968 Election," a-book by the foundation's director. Herbert E. Alexander. The book will be published Thursday.

The clash came as other army units held back a crowd of about 590 Protestants who broke away from the main body of the march and surged toward the Catholic Mayo Street area.

No injuries or arrests were reported in either incident, according to an army spokesman, who spid the troops fired "a number of rounds" above the crowd's heads

More than 3,000 banner-waving Protestants, wearing bowler hats, white kid gloves, orange sashes and carrying rolled umbrellas, the traditional Orange Order regains, marched in the parade commemorating the 17th-century victory of Protestant King William of Orange over the Roman Catholic forces of King James II.

"Go home, you bums, go home," one group of Roman Catholics shouted at the marchers from behind an army barrier.

Several of the 30 Protestant clergymen accompanying the marchers ran up. "In the name of Gcd, don't be provoked," one urged.

All streets leading to the threemile parade route, which wound out of the Protestant Shankill area and back again, were blocked off by more than 2,000 troops and police.

Soldiers with rifles pointed toward onlookers escorted the marchers. Police and army marksmen covered the route from rooftops, Armored cars, water cannon and ferret tanks were parted on side streets.

The next day, as the show opened, Mr. Fedoseyev reportedly threatened to announce that the French had refused him asylum and to seek refuge elsewhere.

Prench officials relented, and the scientist disappeared from his Paris hotel that day. A separate ort said that he actually left Paris on June 1. . The British Broadcasting Corp. said he entered England on Friday.

Mr. Blocker and Mr. Norman interviewed Mr. Ellsberg in Cam-bridge, Mass., last week, just be-fore he and his wife vanished. They are not known to have been seen since Wednesday.

The Newsweek interviewere said Mr. Elisberg described the report as "a good starting point for a real understanding of the war, the U.S. equivalent of the Nuremberg war crimes documents."

The Flat Motor Co. reached a provisional pay agreement yesterday with its 184,000 workers that is considered a big step forward in efforts to improve the stmosphere of coaffict in much of Italian industry. in Warsaw,

The agreement, reached after 50 hours of negotiations presided over by Labor Minister Carlo Donat-Cattin, is expected to end a wave of strikes and violence that have crippled Fiat production during the last ten weeks.

One indication of improved labor climate came almost imtń mediately when metal-workers' unions called off a national strike scheduled for Tuesday.

A Fiat spokesman said that the agreement includes a basic 30-lire (4.8-cent) rise in the hourly rate for all workers. The company also pledged to improve conditions for workers and agreed to set up factory committees to oversee the improvement in conditions. The workers also are guaranteed contracts, promotion opportunities, improved night and overtime pay and longer breaks.

Second Post Article

WASHINGTON, June 30 (AP). -The Washington Post reported yesterday that secret Pentagon papers showed that the Johnson administration's strategists had little expectation that the pauses in the bombing of North Vietnam in 1965 and 1968 would produce Deace talks.

But the Johnson administra tion policy-makers did believe the halts Washington ordered time to time in its air atfrom tacks on North Vietnam "would help placate domestic and world opinion," according to the account

The Post's article, by Murrey

Marder, said: "The Pentagon study discloses that some strategists in the Johnson administration planned to use unproductive bombing pauses as a justification for es calating the war.

Outlined Privately

"This idea was first outlined privately by U.S. officials soon after the bombings of the North began in 1965. "These planners regarded the to reduce tension and then intensify it, to produce 'one more turn of the screw in order to crack the enemy's resistance to negotistions.' the report states."

"Throughout these years American officials regarded their terms for peace as virtually irreconcilable with the conditions offered by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong, recognized that the terms for peace talks would have to be eased before negotiations could even begin "

U.S.-North Vietnamese talks finally got under way in Paris after President Lyndon B. Johnson halted the bombing of the northern parts of North Vietnam on March 31, 1968, Broader Paris discussions including the Viet Cong and South Vietnam began after Mr. Johnson completely stopped the air attacks on the North on Oct. 31, 1968. The Post article said that in the 1965-68 period, before the Paris session began, the Penta-gon study reported: The most uncompromising U.S. planners insisted that the enemy would interpret the pauses in the bombing as a sign of American softness."

American people know," Mr. O'Brien told newsmen at an Omaha meeting of Democratic governors," that our involvement in Southeast Asia was supported at every step by the Republican members of Congress and, in particular, by Richard Niron throughout the 1960s."

Sen. Nixon Plans To Extend GI-Drug War

By Carroll Kilpatrick KEY BISCAYNE, Fla., June 20 (WP) .- President Nixon's new anti-narcotics program among servicemen overseas, which is scheduled to begin tomorrow in Vietnam, will bo extended in about a month to those in West Germany and eventually to all returning servicemen.

Administration officials confirmed today that the program announced at the White House Thursday would be extended as rapidly as possible elsewhere to fuifill the President's promise of a major all-oot attack on the growing drug problem among returning from Vietnam to determino if be has been using narcotics.

The plan is to give a urinalysis test to every serviceman

The Treatment

If the test is positive, the GI will undergo a week's detoxification treatment in Vietnam and then up to three weeks of treatment in the United State before being discharged or returned to duty.

In the program announced Thursday, the President requested legislation to permit the military to retain np to 30 days "any individual due for discharge who is a narcotics addict."

White House spokesmen promised that servicemen who are found to be on drugs or who voluntarily apply for treatment will not be penalized.

Mr. Nixon requested an addi-tional $155 million for the fight on narcotics in the fiscal year beginning July 1, for a total of $$70 million.

tax rate would be cut over four years, from 50 percent to 48 per-cent. The American rate is 48 Dercent Federal inheritance taxes would bo ended. Mr. Benson said that to encourage the use of antipollution eqoipment, ho was excluding it from Canada's general 12 percent manufacturers' sales tax. Reductions in excises and tariffs were designed to benefit the following industries: consumer electronics margarino, petro-chemicals logging, pulp and paper and electric utilities. The budget contained several measures to encourago Canadians to invest at homo rather than abroad but no new restrictions on United States investment in Canada, a controversial topic these days.

No Dollar Parity

Nor did Mr. Benson announce a new fixed parity for tha Canadian dollar, which has been floating freely in the foreign ex-change market since June 1, 1970. The minister forecast stronger economic growth in the second half of 1971 and declining unemployment. Mr. Benson'a ad-visors have told him that tho uremployment rate-6.3 percent in May-may drop to 5 percent, a so-called "full employment" level, by the end of 1972. MT Benson's reluctance to stimulate the economy more forcefully was evidently linked to a fear of inflation.

There is still too much slack in the economy," ho told tho House of Commons. "At the same time, costs are still rising at a rate that causes concern about future price developments,"

Higher Than U.S. Taxes have been higher in Canada than in the United States for years. No new comparison was published today, but officials acknowledged that the Canadian tox burden would continue to be heavier.

All taxpayers would benefit from increased exemptions, to $1,500 from $1,000 for unmarried persons and to $2,850 from $2,000 for married couples. The exemption for each dependent child remains $300.

Other forms of tax relief included special treatment for the elderly, blind and bedridden, and deductions for child-care and the cost of moving to a new job.

As an incentive to the expansion of Canadian-controlled small businesses in which the public does not have stock, the government proposed to tax the first $50,000 of income at 25 percent instead of 46 percent.

Five of the plants were order-

The AEC conceded that the five plants told to modernize will have to shut down to do so, but said that the others ordered to redoce operating temperatures will undergo no serious service disruptions.

"Insofar as the AEC can now determine," the AEC said. "the application of these criteria (i.e., tha lowering of peak temperatures) is expected to permit normal electric power output at all, or almost all, these reactors."

The AEC orders to the seven plants follow weeks of study and analysis of failures of an emorgency cooling system being test-ed at the National Reactor Testing Station near Arco, Idaho.

Soviet Labor Shortage Results

Russian Youths Scorning Blue-Collar Jobs

By Bernard Gwertzman MOSCOW, June 20 (NYT) ----

A Leningrad industrialist complained yesterday that, although the working class was described. as the leading force in Soviet society, most young people felt that their lives were ruined if they had to become workers.

In a two-article series, which concluded yesterday morning in Pravda, the Communist party paper, Georgi A. Kulagin, the general director of the Sverdlov Machine Tool plant, said that industry would be hard put to find workers if the present trend continued.

There is already a labor shortage in parts of the Soviet Union, and many plants have been unable to work around the clock because of their inability to staff the unattractive night shifts. Mr. Kulagin said that, unless society gave more emphasis to what now were regarded as demeaning jobs, there would soon be few truck drivers, policemen, janitors and others in similar positions.

Mr. Kulagin had commented before on the situation where high-school graduates want to go on to college or to white-collar jobs and spurn blue-

The fact that Pravda decided to give his views this amount of attention would indicate that at least some persons in the party hierarchy were disposed to agree with his concern about "elitism."

Soviet sociologists have been aware for many years of this development, but few have offered any concrete solutions. With the party stressing the

Pompidou Sees Big Air, Sea, Land Military Review

TOULON, France. June 20 (UPI).--President Georges Pompidou today presided over France's higgest military review in 25 years -a display of army, navy and forces to mark the end of major allied maneuvers in the Mediterranean.

Mr. Pompidou and Prime Minister Jacques Chaban-Delmas flew to France's chief military port to board the streraft carrier Clemenceau and inspect displays of French land, sea and air prowess. Military officials said that never sinco 1946, shortly after World War II, had France put on such a big combined display. The re-view marked the end of three major air-sea exercises to test command structures between the Western allies and aircraft-warship coordination. Warplanes of the U.S. Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean took part in the exercises-code-named Tater, Mediter and Suter-along with planes from West Germany, Holland and Spain. French officials said the exerelses aimed to test the defenses of southeast France in case of a Mediterranean crisis.

need for technological progress educators have turned their attention to providing opportunities for sifted children to learn special skills in the sciences and anguages,

Mr. Kulsgin believes that such special schools produce a feeling that such students are better than others.

He noted a recent poll published in Novosibirsk that out of a preference scale of 80 occupations, high school seniors gave highest choice to mathematicians, physicists, thologists, surgeons, geologists, writers, actors and astronauts. The two occupations dear to his industry, lathe operators and millingmachine operators, were ranked 39th and 40th. The last two places were filled by accountants and bookkeepers. In a similar poll in Kostroma he said, lathe operators and milling-machine operators placed 75th and 76th. We have people who work reluctantly, try to find work that is easy and take from society more than they give," he said. "Unfortunately, some forms of work necessary to society are not regarded as honorable by youth." Education Blamed

He attributed this lack of interest to "shortcomings in education, the preparation of the new generation for a working life."

Mr. Kulagin attacked schools that have special programs in mathematics, physics, biology or foreign languages. He said that these schools were supposed to be for gifted children, but many parents sought to send their chidren there because it was the thing to do.

He proposed doing away with these schools and having all chidren go to the same kinds of institutions.

"If the general program in a school for the masses holds back the development of a gifted child, this causes society much less harm than the inculcation of the belief that a child is something special," he said.

He called upon schools to make "the most active" efforts to prepare youth for industry. "In our country, the working class was, is and will be the leading class, the main produc-tive and political force in so-

The limited edition of Nowy Drogi, the Central Committee organ, while omitting Mr. Gomulta's version of events, does include explanations and arguments by other party leaders since ousted, including Politburo members who remained un-

Mr. Jaszczuk was said to have been responsible for the economic policy that produced the dem-onstrations and Mr. Elizako reportedly ordered the massive police and army intervention that produced the riots. Mr. Strzelecki was faulted for having failed to maintain contact between the party and the masses.

Two examining magistrates in separate cases accused the philosopher-playwright as nominal pub-jisher of two extremist periodicals that had alleged police brutality and prison abuses. The offenses could bring sentences totaling up to four years in prison and $230,-000 in fines. Mr. Sartre was released without bail pending a hearing in September.

Mr. Sartre, who will be 66 to-morrow, had been inviting arrest for more than a year by lending his name as publisher of ex-tremist papers whose youthful editors and vendors had been subject to frequent arrests and seizures.

He and his companion, Simona de Beauvoir, had even peddled the banned issues of the Maoist Cause du Peuple on the Boule-vard St. Germain, hut were ignored by the police, apparently under orders

Change of Mind

The government's change of mind coincided with a heating up of the dispute over 'law and order" and police behavior. It followed a demonstration by Paris newspapermen over the alleged heating of one of them by the police, and an apparent retaliation by the police, who vanished from the Latin Quarter during an outbreak of looting two weeks ago.

The current issue of the ultrarightist weekly Minute bore a headline in huge black type: "Jail Sartre!" It declared: "Enough induigence for the one who incites disorder, pillage and hatred.

For his part. Mr. Sartre had announced in the Cause du Peuple the intention to convene next Sucday a "popular tribunal to try the French police,"

It now appears almost certain that a referendum will be held next summer and that the electorate will successfully abolish the law.

The court has three monthe to verify all the signatures. Then the Constitutional Court will decide on the validity of the re-quest. After that, the cabinet will advise the president on a date for the vote between April 15 and June 15, 1972.

It would he Italy's first referendum since the nation rejected the monarchy in June, 1946, followed by the departure of King Umberto II into exile in Portugal

Dr. Mario Fusecchia, the Rome campaign organizer, hailed the number of signatures as "an extremely significant sounding of opinion" in the face of hostility from leftist and anti-clerical forces

"The result has exceeded our hopes... The signatures do not carry the names of the Catholic Church or of the Christian Democrate party, hut of the Italian people."

Communist Attack

But the Communist party newspaper L'Unita declared the campaign "the broadest reactionary and anti-popular attempt presentiv under way in Italy," and prodivorce groups hegan massing their forces for what threatens to become a bitter political battle.

Tonight, supporters of the Italian Divorce League and the newly formed League for the Abolition of the Concordat staged a protest meeting and an allnight vigil in Florence.

meeting quoted Mr. Brandt as The vigil opened a campaign saying that the four-power negofor a counter-referendum to abolish Italy's 1929 concordat with the Vatican, which is due for revision final phase." soon and which they claim the Vatican has broken by allegedly intervening in the referendum campaign.

Divorce League spokesman A said that compromise was no longer possible with the Roman Catholic groups.

Soviet Communist party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev and other East European Communist leaders. Mr. Honecker made it clear that post-Ulbricht East Germany would stand out less as an independent quantity in the Soviet orhit, moving toward greater integration within the bloc.

Following the Russian line, the congress declared its remainess "in the interest of detente in the heart of Europe to contributa toward normalizing relations with West Berlin."

The Communists said the city "does not and never will belong to the Federal Republic," but in contrast to earlier pronouncements and apparently at Russian pressure, they dropped all reference to West Berlin as "an independent political entity," a term seen unacceptable in the West. In outlining relations with West Germany, the East Germans also appeared more moderate than before. They did not press for full diplomatic recognition, but called for relations "based on equal rights and on international laws."

Pentagon Major Test-'This, Too, Vietnam Wrought' Papers

By Max Frankel

NEW YORK (NYT) .- The Pentagon's own best account of how the United States tricked itself into a war it could not win began to appear serially in The New York Times last week-until The Times was ordered to stop. at least temporarily, to let the government prove that further publication would cause "ir-reparable" injury to the national defense and ought to be enjoined by court order. presumably forever.

Thus came into being the case of the United States of America v. The New York Times Co.

For the first time, as far as surone could tell an American newspaper of general circulation was restrained by prior court nrder from publishing articles documents whose content and could only be surmised by the government and whose damaging properties. therefore, could only be assumed. For The Times refused to let either judge or general, or even President, inspect or edit the articles before they appeared in print. And it vowed to fight to the Supreme Court, if necessary, to beat back the government's attempt at orship."

Purest Conflict

The case posed the purest possible conflict between individual freedom and national security.

• Legally, it was a contest between the First Amendment freedoms of speech and press against the government's right to pro-tect itself by court injunction.

Symbolically, it was typical of the conflicts of the Vletnam era, between the rule of law and the necessity for order, between the demands for social justice at home and the requirements of physical security abroad, between the rights of the citizen and the rights of society.

· Politically, it was the climax of two years of tension between the Nixon administration and the dominant instruments of communication. The use of the espionage laws to inhibit and harass The New York Timesand then The Washington Post. as well-was interpreted by some as the ultimate expression of President Nixon's persistent resentment of those newspapers aod Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew's roundhouse denunciatians of them.

But it was not Republican t .terests that Attorney General John N. Mitchell had to defend. except in the broadest sense that more Republicans than Democrats are on the conservative side of the current social conflict in the final decision of the court The Justice Department came to court, before a new district court judge, Murray L Gurfein, who ordered the paper to hait the series to give the government a chance to prove its charges of dire in jury.

Unprecedented Action

This unprecedented "prior restraint" resulted from the judge's view that the damage to The Times of a few more days' delay could not possibly compare with the possible damage that the government wished to prove to obtain a permanent restraint. A temporary restraining order was fixed to expire at 1 p.m. Saturday

As the government and Times lawyers appeared for argument before Judge Gurfein on Friday, there arrived that morning's Washington Post, with a new and distinct account of the secret (Pentagon atudy, covering the Eisenhower years, which The Times was under orders to hold back. Despite the evidence that the story was now spreading fast, the judge refused to rule the issue moot.

He searched in the testimony for factual evidence of the government's charge of irreparable harm, even allowing four hours of secret discussion of secrets. He heard The Times contest not only the charge of damage but also the claims of legal authority for the silencing of a newspaper. He searched throughout tor a compromise arrangement by which "patriotic" men on both sides, acting "in good faith," could find a way to inform the public in the fullest possible way while still guarding the nation's most vital political and military secrets.

As the White House acknowledged, the government now saw the damage as already done. It wished to salvaga only a precedent for future restraint and perhaps some evidence for later criminal prosecution of the sources, the newspapers, or both, But The Times refused to surrender any part of its right to decide what it will publish in this matter, and so did The Washington Post when it was brought to court the same day.

Enjoined on Appeal

The Post was not enjoined on the first round, but then it was, on appeal.

The Times, after suffering four days of silence and frantic court debate, won release Saturday from the court's restraint. It ... also won Judge Gurfein's opinion -confirming its own-that there were "no cogent reasons . . . as to why these documents, except

Times in the first three installments about the Pentagon papers have already been universally interpreted as the severest possible indictment of the Lyndon B. Johnson administration and the officials brought to emineoce and power by John F. Kennedy's Eastern intellectual establishment -so much so that a common first reaction of many readers was to suspect a deliberate leak of gorernment secrets and documents by the Nixon administration.

"Tomorrow: The Konnedy administration increases the stakes." The Times said before it was forced to suspend the Vietnam series last Tuesday.

Times Refuses

The Tunes refused to divulge the sources of its onaterials. It refused to state how it came by them, through the "investigative reporting" of Neil Sheehan, a reporter in the Washington bureau. It refused, despite the persistent pleas of the court and the federal government to give any more than the sketchiest descriptions of the documents in its possession. And it refused to surrender the materials. To yield on any of these points, it argued, would risk betrayal of its sources and the loss of confidence by all other potential sources of information --inside as well as outside gov-ernment. This right to stand mule had already been tried in last year's case of Times reporter Earl Caldwell, and resulted in court victories awaiting Supreme Court review.

The issue now was the freedom of the press itself-the right to

Embarrassment Seen

There can be no doubt that the publication of such a record, as much as the misery of the war itself, will temporarily embarrass the U.S. government in the eyes of the world and its own citizens. and it may damage the professional reputations of some of the principal actors.

The tonic value of such an orev of truth-telling remains to be seen. "For I am constrained to find as a fact that the in camera proceedings at which representatives of the Department of State, Department of Defense and the Joint Chiefs of Staff testified did not convince this court that the publication of these historical documents would seriously breach the national security. It is true, of course, that any breach of security will cause the jitters in the security agencies themselves and indeed in foreign governments who deal with us. But to sustain a preliminary injunction the government would have to establish not only irreperable injury, but also the possibility of success in the litigation itself. It is true that the court has not been able to read through the many volumes of documents to the history of Vietnam, but it did give the government an opportunity to pinpoint what it believed to be vital breaches to our national security of sufficient impact to contravert the right of a free press. Without revealing the content of the testimony, suffice it to say that no cogent reasons were advanced as to why these documents, except in the general framework of embarrassment pre-

"The First Amendment of a 'free press' must be read in the light of the struggle of free men against prior restraint of publication. From the line of Blackstone it was a tenet of the founding fathers that precensorship was the primary evil to be dealt with in the First Amendment. Fortunatel; upon the facts adduced in this case there is no sharp clash such as might have appeared between the vital security interest of the nation and the compelling constitutional doctrine against prior restraint. If there be some embarrassment to the government in security aspects as remote as the general embarrossment that flows from any security breach, we must learn to live with it. The security of the nation is not at the ramparts alone. Security also lies in the value of our free institutions. A cantankerous press, an obstinate press, a ubiquitous press must be suffered by those in authority in order to preserve the even greater values of freedom of expression and the right of the people to know

The Dutch Catholics' Church Within the Church Accommodating Loyalty to Rome and Innovations at Home By James M. Johnson AMSTERDAM (IHT).-"One Dutchman is a theologian, two a church and three a schism." About four years ago, this adage was frequently invoked by Dutch Roman Catholics seeking to ex-plain the turmoil in their church, their sudden progressiveness after decades of quiet inertia, the Holy See's openly expressed fears and warnings, the pfigrimages to the Netherlands by journalists and Catholic liberals from other nations. Controversy constantly erupted and, for a time perhaps, it did really seem that three Dutchmen could make a schism.

The uproar, for the most part, has now subsided. According to the optimist. the Dutch church has entered a period of consolidation. The pessimist, however, is convinced that the surface calm cloaks a mood of trustration, unrest and disillusionment that is even more dangerous for the future of the church than open conflict.

Virtually until the opening of the Second Vatican Council in 1963, the Dutch church was fairly conservative. But pressures for change apparently had been building up since World War II and the council unleashed them, propelling the church here to the forefront of the Catholic progressive movement.

However, the liberals, as in other countries, tend to be highly articulate and their success in publicizing their views and experiments created an illusion of all-conquering liberalism.

The liberals may represent about 15 to 20 percent of the Dutch Catholic population, while conservatives account for at least 10 to 15 percent, it is estimated. The liberals are extremely vocal, active and persuasive. The con-servatives are far less effective in public relations. They tend to rely—especially Confrontatie (Confrontation), the largest and most militant of their groups-upon contacts with powerful conservatives at the Vatican to achieve through anthoritarian methods what they apparently cannot accomplish through per-suasion. The conservatives have frequently denounced liberals to appeals to Rome for disciplinary action to curh the progressives and restore the "old order of things" to the Netherlands.

The vast majority of Dutch Catholics must be regarded as moderates but more inclined to the left than the right. The Dutch are proud of their tradi-tion of toleration and the liberals have benefited from this predilection. Between the liberals and conservatives stand the seven bishops of the Netherlands, ied by Ber-nard Jan Cardinal Alfrink, the archbishop of Utrecht. The hierarchy is constantly assailed from both left and right, but it has successfully maintained contact with the progressives, Rome and, to a lesser extent, the Dutch conservatives.

The bishops probably reflect fairly accurately the mentality of the moderate majority of Dutch Catholics. They want to keep both liberals and conservatives within the fold, retain the bonds of unity with the pope in Rome and the churches of other countries and, at the same time, permit the Dutch church to develop new structures and concepts that meet the particular needs and capabilities of the Netherlands without going too fast or too slow. The bishops and their advisers have been amazingly successful, due in great part to the leader-ship of Cardinal Alfrink, a shy and perhaps conservative prelate.

"In his beart, the cardinal is a Roman Catholic," a church official said recently. "but he will fight for the Dutch church. He is prudent, however, and will not seek battles that don't need to be fought." He is also a clever man and a realist.

حکد ان الد مل

Maintaining unity with Rome has been, perhaps, the most dif-ficult of the Dutch hierarchy's chores, for the bishops not only must battle the conservative tofluences of the Roman Curia, but also must constantly struggle within themselves against their training and inclination to obedience toward Rome.

There is also the complication f different cultures. "One of of different cultures, "One of our problems is the difference in terminology," Dr. O. ter Reegen of the Pastoral Institute in Rotterdam said. "For example, when we refer to pastor activity, we mean social action and other work that can be performed by laymen, married priests or any-one else. But pastoral for Rome always means priestly and so we bave had many needless clashes.

More Ancient Basis

This and other differences are so pronounced that Cardinal Alfrink has sought to provide a theological foundation for local development based on a tradition even more ancient than Roman centralism. In 1967, be told a European hishons' conference:

"Within the universal church, the local churches should have the possibility of demonstrating own character. The unitheir versality of the church is nourished by a multitude of cultures and traditions which are all linked in the unity of the authentic faitb of the church. Here then is the basis of the aspiration for a legitimate piuriformity in the unity of the church."

Simonis, a conservative, as bishop of Rotterdam.

The appointment was attacked by diocesan clergy and pastoral councils, defended by the papal nuncio, criticized by the hierarchy but forced through by the Holy See. The Dutch argued that other candidates were democratically recommended by the local church. Rome argued that the appointment of bishops is a papal prerogative-it has been since the late middle ages. dom.

Bishop Simonis was accepted by the Dutch hishops on the condition that be would collaborate with them. And he has found, according to various sources, that conservatism must yield to the realities of the Dutch church. Ironically, he is now under intense attack from the conservatives for his accommodation.

Meanwhile, the Dutch bishops are painfully aware that the battles with Rome and the conservatives, in which no one seems to win, no one lose and little appears to change, are alienating many progressives. In recent months, they have increased their efforts to find ways in which to accommodate the liberals without further antagonizing Rome or the right.

Father Kuipers proposed thet the Septuagint group be chartered by the hierarchy as a pious association, which would be structurally linked to the diocese but which would enjoy considerable freedom to speak and act independently of church official-

Father Kuipers is acutely aware of the tendency of active liberal groups to move away from the cburch. Shalom, a group of Prot-estant and Catholic laymen and a few ministers and priests, wes formed about ten years ago to promote Christian unity and reform of church life and structures. "Many laymen and groups are silently leaving the church," Father Kuipers admitted. "And many of them are the most active and committed persons. We must do everything that we can to keep up contacts with them and to find ways in which they can have the freedom to develop and to share their gifts with the church. It is not easy, but it is essential."

RAGUE (IRT) .- The cold and rain of June this year pertly reflect the dreary spirit a small and sensitive people lplessly watching its rich culre being coldly and systematilly assassinated. Burdened with bankrupt economy, stifled by re claustrophobia of closed fronrs and moral isolation, 13 1/2 illion Czechs observe with mote shelief the near sterility of their tellectuals, who are jobless, the sintegration of their schools and such of Prague, one of the most eautiful cities in the world, clowr crumbling into ruin.

Even more astounding to Czechs, who may never set foot in the place, is the spacious new Soviet Cultural Center, one of the only new buildings in town, which went up in six short months.

Elsewhere in Prague, what may to the tourist look like widespread "restoration" is actually outright neglect or total abandon.

Not only did 50,000 (an official figure) Czechs, most members of the elite, emigrate after the 1968 invasion, but now there is another population problem in the fact that general discouragement, uncertainty about the future, and the housing crisis are responsible for a sharply declining birthrate.

Confidence and Confidentiality

Republics, it used to be said, are ungrateful. As a general thesis, this is dubious, but it is a plain fact that democratic governments find the conduct of foreign relations extremely difficult, especially in a world which plays that complex and often deadly game under a great variety of rules, with those set down by Machiavelli in "The Prince" too often predominant.

This is perhaps the clearest lesson of the battles over the publication of the classified Pentagon documents, although in the current heat of those battles it may seem either irrelevant or a cop-out. The day-to-day conduct of foreign relations requires confidentiality-a point which President Nixon has been emphasizing. Acceptance by a democratic society of the results of that conduct requires confidence-which can only result from caudor-aithough success will often obscure the lack of candor. When, as in Vietnam, there has been neither candor nor success, confidence in both the government and the rules it has established are gravely impaired.

It is perfectly obvious that the current mood in the United States over the Southeast Asian imbroglio, enhanced by tha publicity accorded the Pentagon files, will hamper the present government in the pursuance of diplomatic relations with many countries. It may unfairly damage the reputations and usefuiness of persons who worked under the old rules governing intragovernmental communications-it should not be forgotten that one of the charges ieveled against congressional committees in the Mc-Carthy and pre-McCarthy period was their acute interest in private departmental files. Moreover, since the exposure of American tactics and policies was unilateral, it has produced a one-sided picture, damaging to American prestige.

But this springs from the nature of American democracy itself-and shows that the system, the core of the republic, still maintains its full vigor. The people of the United States know more today about the Vietnamese crisis than tha people of Great Britain about the Suez crisis; than the people of France about the Algerian crisis. And one must leave wholly out of the account the Communist countries, which seldom even acknowledge that a crisis exists.

The American people, in other words, through all the heat of court struggles and public controversy, have reason for confidence in their fundamental system. They have an independent-at present it seems much too independent-executive; an independent-increasingly independent-legislature; a very independent judiciary. And they have a highly independent fourth estate in the news media. This has never prevented unified action in times of externally imposed, genuine peril. But when executive policy has gotten out of hand-as in Vietnam-the reaction, however belated, is powerful. And that is something the executive hranch must learn to live with.

Progress on Okinawa

as real and clear-cut a significance as the transfer of territory, and so the signing of an agreement hy which the United States returns to Japan the war-captured Ryukyu island chain including Okinawa is particularly satisfying. It hespeaks on the part of the Nixon administration not only a generous gesture to an enemy-turned-ally but a shrewd investment in continued good relations with the United States' most important friend in Asia. That the agreement has been concluded in a way to strengthen and stabilize U.S.-Japan relations, and at a moment when both countries are reviewing their world roles, is a tribute to the diplomats involved on both sides.

Okinawa has been the one major Asian base area used by the United States on an unrestricted hasis; it has been the keystone Few acts in international relations have down such questions is to phase out bases on an expeditious timetable. The Pentagon's passion to hold on to real estate simply cannot be indulged.

In a psrallel development pleasing on several counts, the possibility that textile senators might halk early ratification of the Okinawa agreement seems to have diminished. Though President Nixon so far has not claimed credit for this, he deserves to. Eariler, in pique at his failure to limit textile imports from Japan in his own fashiou, he seemed ready to hold Okinawa reversion hostage to a formal Japanese agreement on textiles. But meanwhile, he has quietly negotiated a textile agreement with Taiwan and he is negotiating now with South Korea and Hong Kong; an agreement with Malaysia already is in effect. With a textile pact with those countries in hand, Mr. Nixon could either fix quotes on Japan (under the Agricultural Assistance Act) or coar Japan into line. This is not the ideal way to solve a trade dispute, hut nothing hetter seems to he on the horizon and something is needed to get textiles out of the way of Japanese-American relations as a whole. A textile solution would end the threat of Senate blockage of Okinawa ratification. Those two issues wrapped up, Tokyo and Washington could go on to consider the whole range of other issues, political and especially economic, on which the further growth of their friendship depends. PORT - SAINTE - MAXENCE, France.-One blazing differance between free government and government by restraint comes in their contrasting views of the press. Authoritarian re-gimes insist on deciding them-selves what is proper for the people to know.

Lenin wrote: "Just as the army cannot fight without arms, so the party cannot carry out its ideological mission without that efficient and powerful weapon, the press... We cannot put the press into unreliable hands."

There has never been a press problem in the Soviet Union. Lee Hills, when president of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, observed several years ago: "Manipulation of the news is the Soviet way of manipulat-ing people, and this manipulation of human beings is the biggest difference between communism and our system."

Free government accepts the tiple of press freedom bot seeks to insure that such freedom doesn't impinge upon national security. This has produced legal restrictions which never quite seem to work

Articles 99 and 100 of the West German Penal Code ban publication of information deemed ureiudicial to "the interest of the Federal Republic," a vague con-cept already successfully challenged by one magazine. The French Penal Code (Article 78) prohibits disclosure of "military information which has not been made public by the competent authority and whose disclosure is manifestly of a nature to prejudice national defense."

British Secrets

The French have been rather successful in making this stick and one consequence has been periodic complaints about government interference with the information media. The British Official Secrets' Act (comprising three separate laws of 1911, 1920 and 1939) bans information "prejudicial to the safety or interests of the state" and publication or even retention of an official document by anyone who "has no right to retain it."

But the British have had trouble reconciling law and liberty. Long before the secrets legislation, William Howard Rus-sell of The Times of London horrified the government when he wrote of the "incompetency, iethargy, aristocratic hauteur, official indifference. favor, routine, perverseness and stupidity" on the Crimean battlefront.

The concept of official secrets was grassly misused when the whole world knew the story of King Edward VIII's impending abdication, but Englishmen had to glean what they could from foreign reports. This year The London Sunday . Telegraph won an action brought against it hy the government for publishing a selves make the polloy of secrecy

In Japan there is some dispute whether these terms include continued American nuclear storage and deployment. The answer is no, not without Japanese consent, which in the circumstances of Tokyo's continuing Biroshima-born "nuclear allergy" is unlikely to be soon forthcoming. That Japan has agreed to let the United States ratain use for now of most Okinawa hase facilities has raised some anxieties in Japan. It may yet lead some Americans to ask whether any real change has been made. The best way to put

With order restored. Mr. Gierek has sought to project a new image of concern for the problems of the average Polish citizen, in part by traveiing assiduously about the country and meeting people face to face. The press has been given a somewhat greater area of expression. A government spokesman has been appointed to facilitate the spread of poblic information about state policies. There was for a time some improvement in Church-State relations, and laws to ease restrictions on private farmers are near passage.

Welcome as are these and other changes, the Gierek regime strikes many Poles as Moscow must never be tempted to think Edward Glerek could become an Alexander Dubcek, for if it entertained that fear the Kremlin would act as energetically as it did in August 1968. All this means that Mr. Gierek's reforms and efforts at change can only scratch the surface. Nevertheless he runs the danger of rousing expectations that he cannot fulfill, and thus engendering potentially explosive frustrations. Perhaps Mr. Gierek is jost as happy that the Poilsh people, by all accounts, still remain passive and do not believe that anything more than a minor change has occurred in the manner they are ruled and by whom.

The integrity of the government, the judgment and even the houor of many officials are at issue. The cost has been appalling and confusion over how it all happened and where it is all leading remains. In short, the issues are too important to be evaded any longer, or to be left to the Department of Justice and the press. It was only when Secretary of Defense Laird refused to deconteminate and declassify the documents for the Foreign Relations Committee that men who had worked on the papers and reporters who had heard about them set out to expose the blunders and the cover-up.

A Symbol

This conflict between the government and the press is only a symbol of a much larger and more serious problem. There has always been a certain amount of deception between the executive and legislative branches, but it has been much worse under Presidents Johnson and Nixon and suspicioo grows on itself. For years now we have not had that feeling of honest differences openly faced and plainly discussed which is essential even in adversary proceedings. PARIS. June 20 (IHT) .- In pormal circumstances, a bond offering from double-A rated Scott Paper would go through the Eurobond market "like a hot knife through butter," says one roocialist

In the United States, interest rates are going up. Two medium-zized banks have raised their prime rates and the big moncycenter banks are expected to follow soon. The expansion of the money supply continues, followed by fresh warnings about a new wave of inflation. That President's chief economic adviser warns that the pace of the recovery may not be enough to get the unemployment rate down and suggests that new fiscal stimulation may be in the works. Against this uncertain background, Scott's "hot knife" needed edditional warming-like a discount price of $985 for every $1,000 face value bond. The $20 million bonds curry an 8 3/4 percent coupon, thus yielding 8.94 percent. Although the issue had not been formally released for trading, it was quoted at 96 1/2 bid 87 1/3 asked, on the secondary market.

Meanwhile, Hass Overseas, priced the previous week at 98, was quoted last week at 96 1/4-97 1/4.

Except for the $25 million of 8-yaar notes announced last week by Banque Nationala de Paris, the straight dollar shelf is empty. The BNP issue, expected at 99 with a coupon of 8 1/4 percent, is a certain success, bankers say, as the bank—the largest on the Continent—is, for prestige rea-sons, hardly likely to allow the issue to sag.

The one new issue announced last week was in Units of Account (UA)-the seventh so far year-for Société this de Développement Régional, a group of nine French regional authorities. The governmentguaranteed issue is for 12 million UA at an expected 8 percent.

Following the pattern of recent weeks-an effort to take advantage of the unique circumstances and broaden the market-ability of the UA-the issue was announced on the heels of the pricing of the previous UA bond. Even the administration's top economic adviser, Paul W. Mc-Cracken, eschewed his consistently optimistic posture and expressed some dissatisfaction with the pace of the business recovery.

In Paris, the prestigious Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development also took a dim view of the unemployment situa-tion in the United States, saying that the average rate of jobless-ness this year would be "almost one percentage point higher" than last year's 5 percent.

If that assessment proved to be correct, it would cast strong doubt on the administration's ability to achieve its 4 1/2 percent unem-ployment target by the middle of next year in advance of the presidential election.

President Nixon's advisers had been counting on a growth rate of at least 9 percent for the American economy this year in their blneprint for significantly reducing the unemployment rolls. But it is obvious now, after six mooths of rather stimulative fiscal and monetary policies, that the goal is not being met.

By Thomas E. Mullaney NEW YORK, June 20 (NYT) .-current dollars, but that is Those businessmen and econo-mists who have advocated a pa-tient stance by Washington in dealing with the economy took heart last week from the latest batch of upbeat economic statisreflecting the factor of inflation. Unless we get some strong real growth, we won't get unemploytionary significance." ment down." A look at the prevailing trend tics. Their position, however, was far from universal.

last week was also rather disconcerting. It disclosed four leading indicators pointed upward and eight level; five coincident indicators up and three level, and two lagging indicators up, two level and two tending odwnward. "With the trends of only four of the 12 leaders up," the ana-

Benito Garozzo, of Rome, is reputed to be one of the world's most aggressive bidders, and he proved it on the diagramed deal. It was played in a Sunday Times invitation pair tournament in London in which he teamed with Omar Sharif to finish second in a powerful field.

Sharif as North opened one diamond and Garozzo responded one spade rather than one heart -following the tendency of many European experts to bid a short suit before a long one in certain situations.

North raised spades, and South invited game with a hid of three, spades-keeping his heart suit as a possible surprise for the defenders in the play.

North accepted the invitation and West led the chub king. When the dummy appeared, South rather regretted his enterprise, which had been influenced by the state of the match. The trump suit was shaky and the chance of establishing and utilizing the heart suit seemed slight. Instead, South stacked dia-monds, hoping the defenders would not have a ruff available. A diamond to the jack was taken by the king and West led the club queen, which South ruffed. The diamond ten was played, and when East won with the ace he made a good shift to a low trump.

NOBODY The Story of Bert Williams By Ann Charters. Macmillan. 157 pp. $6.95.

MRS. CHARTERS, in this affec- ideal 'coon.' he gave it to tionate and lucid biography, but his stage character w describes Bert Williams as "the first Negro entertainer in America to win the wholehearted admiration of white audiences." In a Variety poll in 1953, he ranked high in a list of the ten most important comedians in the history of the American popular theater. And W.C. Fields called him "the funniest man I ever saw and the saddest man I ever knew." He was born in 1874 and died in 1922. From 1910 until 1918 he was a star of the Ziegfeld Pollies, sharing top billing and comedy skits with Eddie Cantor, Leon Errol, Will Rogers and Ed Wynn, and anticipating by some 20 years the breakthrough of Ethel Waters as a black headliner in a white company in Irving Berlin's "As Thousands Cheer" in 1933. But he did not and at the timecould not anticipate Miss Waters's subsequent triumphs in straight drame in "Mamba's Daughters" and "A Member of the Wedding."

That was why he was so sad. As Mrs. Charters puts it, simply and aptly: "The life of the comedian Bert Williams is the story of a man neatly trapped by the prejudice and intolerance of his times." He was a great actor condemned by the theater con-ventions of his generation to the minstrel show stereotype of a dim-witted, stumblebum; down-atthe-heels, down-on-his-luck darky. No one, apparently, ever played. the part better than he. And no one, in his private life, can have had less in common with the part. He was born not in the South, or anywhere else in the United States, but in Antigua, West Indies, of mined Danish, Spanish and African blood. He was very light skinned, intelligent, well read, articulate-and lonely. When he broke into show business in San Francisco in 1892, there was only one road to success for a black man in the American theater, and that was to play the black man not as the black man really was, but as he had been represented since before the Civil War by white comedians in blackface imitating black men imitating white men and. making a comical mess of it. Bert Williams was not the first to compound the indignity by putting on burnt cork to imitate white men imitating black men initatiog white men. But he achieved a more sympathetic-caricature than any other comedian, white or black. When he first appeared with the Ziegfeld. Follies in 1910, the critic Ashton Stevens said of him: "Bert Williams is the Mark Twain of his-

Liquori 3:57.6 Wins 3d Straight NCAA

By Neil Amdur

SEATTLE, June 20 (NYT).—At a "psychological peak," Marty Liquori shattered 4 minutes for the third time this year en route to a third consecutive National Collegiate outdoor mile title yesterday. The Villanova senior, 21, lowered his NCAA meet record by one-tenth of a second in overwhelming a field of 12 finalists in minutes 57.6 seconds. Liquori's closest competitor was Bob Wheeler, the promising Duke freshman from Timonium, Md., who finished 17 yards behind but recorded his first sub-4-minute clocking, 3:59.9. "I had my nerves up because of the streak," the Cedar Grove, NJ, Olympian said, "This meet at the Streak," the Cedar Grove, and the IC4-A were my two goals this year. I got both." On the third and final day of his golden anniversary meet, a crowd of 12,650 at the University of Washington watched the first sub-4-minute mile ever run in the state.

WASHINGTON - In Washing- mediately," the first wheelbarrow ton classified documents are pusher told Bill. as up in the corridors of the "In the national security," the piling up in the corridors of the Pentagoo, the State Department other explained. and the White House, and the meo who are supposed to leak them to the press are in despair. At the Pentagon the other day, for example, reporters and famous syndicated columnists were going out of their way to avoid the Office of Overt Baker Graduated Document Leakage. The man io charge there, whose code name is Bill, was standing more." in the hall buttonholing complete strangers.

"Listeo to this," Bill said, flipplog open the classified document which he was trying to leak. "This is the latest secret report about the Russian missile buildup. I'm willing to leak it right eway. It's dil yours, my friend, in the national security." "Not e chance."

"If this document isn't published by tomorrow afternooo." Bill argued, "we won't possibly be able to panic Congress in time to get it to vote us another $5 hillion for an American missile huildup. And then there will be a missile gap." "That would be bad." "It certainly would," Bill said. "You wouldn't want to be responsible for damaging the national security hy not taking e little leaked document, would you?"

His lower lip was trembling. It was hard to give him the truth straight out, perhaps because this was the Pentagon. Still. . "I'm not a reporter, Bill." "That's all right," Bill said. You must know somebody who is o reporter. Give it to him." He was still holding out the document for leaking when two strong men approached him pushing wheelbarrows loaded with the latest classified documeots.

"These are to be leaked im-that Congress should therefore vote us more money et once," said the first wheelbarrow pusher. "In the national security," said the other.

Bill was weeping now. "What am I going to do?" he cried. "Since the Justice Department started taking people to court for possession of leaked documents, the press won't take them any "Why don't you declassify them and issue them as press releases?" "Don't talk nonsense et a time like this," Bill hlubbered. "No editor in his right mind would helieve any of this stuff if we didn't put 'classified' labels on it."

"What do they reveal?" BII asked. He was over collapse.

Back at his office Bill's phone was ringing. It was a very loud general. "Why haven't you leaked those documents yet proving that Communism will take over Samoa if Congress doesn't buy me a new jet?" the general was demanding. In front of the White House special assistants for White House leaks were trying to hustle docu-ments among the sightseeing ouses. "Classified, you say?" asked a woman tourist.

"Hush-Hush and Upper-Level Secret," the document leaker replied. "Proves indisputably that oothing can save the country but the re-election of the present administration in 1972. Take it and pass it on to a friend who knows a reporter."

The woman refused. She said it would be treasonous to be a party to publishing a document labeled "Hush-Hush" and "Upper-Level-Secret." The bus took her away while the special assistant for leaks was explaining the difference between good leaks, which, were patriotic, and bad leaks, which let people in on what was going on in Washington.

minute. Then, yelping and squealing, they are put into a device that looks like a tilted merry-go-round and whirled about for a minute. It's a rude welcome into the world, and their cries plainly indicate the pupples would have it otherwise. But, according to Army veterinarians working e special program here at Edgewood Arsenal, there is nothing cruel in the welcome. It's all part of a breeding and testing program that the Army says will result in the "world's smartest dogs" in about ten years. The dogs are to be used scores of military and oonmilitary endeavors.

Col. M. W. Castleberry, the commander of the "superdog" unit, says that the initial chilling and whiring of the pupples makes for a better dog in later life. Russian scientists have demonstrated "conclusively," he says, that when poppies are subject-ed to slight stress, such as cold and whirling soon after they are born, this prepares them for greater stress in later life. enabling them to perform tasks in situations in which other dogs would be too scared or too cold to act. The Army anticipates that by the end of the breeding pro-gram it will have developed dogs that are superior in physical condition, trainability, in-telligence, stability, tempera-ment and ability to perform difficult tasks under the most rigorous and confusing conditions.

The program, run by the Veterinary Corps and officially known as the Bio-Sensor Research Department of Walter Reid Army Institute of Re-search, U. S. Army Research and Development Command, is almost three years old. The budget for the current fiscal year is $225,000. There are 297 dogs in the unit, along with four officers, 30 enlisted men and three civilians. The dogs are mostly Some stay. pupples and mostly German shepherds-256 to he exact. There are also 24 German wirehaired pointers, nine Ger-man shorthaired pointers, and eight cross breeds. Col. Castleberry says that some smaller dogs may be smarter than German shepherds but they lack the physical traits needed in the breeding program.

berry points to one of the "dropouts" from the program. To an untrained eye, it is hard to tell the dropouts from the s. They all appear to be beauties. But the men here can tell the difference. Each dog is evaluated periodically for intelligence, physical condition and temperament and breeding potential. Some are weeded out.

Candidates for "smartest dog" program romp with Bob Bishoff.

The project of breeding a "superdog" is unique in the United States in thet it involves the first effort to im-prove the intelligence of do-mestic animals, Col. Castleberry says.

The specifications setting up the program in 1968 called for developing dogs that "can cope with a critical problem in Southeast Asia, tracking the Occasionally. Col. Castle- enemy and alerting troops to mines, tunneis, boohy trans and ambush." Col. Castleberry says the program will also help produce better dogs for nonmilitary use.

In Vietnam, where there have ocen more than 3,000 dog casualties, and m the United States, dogs have been trained for scouting, patrolling, controlling crowds, locating bombs and land mines, sniffing out caches of marijuana and serving as guide dogs for the blind. Col. Castleberry says the dogs being developed at Edgewood will be able to do these tasks better than before.

"The dog is the best detector the Army has today," Col. Castleberry said. "You can talk about all the electronic gadgets you want, but the dog; is the best. The dog has proved his value time and again in Vietnam.'

Sebastian Palomo Linares, 23, whose earnings of more than $1 million a year are surpassed only by the annual fees commanded by El Cordobes, was annoved and embarrassed by the failure of the impresarios of Madrid's Las Ventas ring to include him on the bill of the annual San Isidro builfight festival. In revenge, Linares-who is having a rather poor year set out Saturday night to fight and kill a record number of bulls at the Vista Alegre ring, in the western suburbs of Madrid. He succeeded beyond his wildest expectations, dispatching no less than 13 toros in a. performance which lasted well into early yesterday morning.

Matadors normally kill only two bulls at a conventional corrida, although star toreres occasionally stage solo performances involving six kills. The previous record was set in 1964 by Antonio Bienvenida, then 46, who was forced to out after his eighth bull because of exhaustion. Linares's cape and muleta work in Saturday's marathon was not exceptional, but he made up for artistic flaws with uncommon stamina. He used 26 sword strokes to kill his quarry, was tossed twice, had the wind knock-ed out of him once, and finished, spisttered with blood, in the oldfashioned way, letting the 13th bull run into the sword. Awarded 12 ears and four tails for his accomplishments, Linares said: This has been one of the happiest days of my life. I have done something that no one else. has done, although many have tried."

12 Howard Hughes, the recluse billionaire believed · living . in the Bahamas after his mysterious departure from Las Vegas last November, was divorced over the weekend by Jean Peters, his wife of 14 years. Judge Kenneth Mann granted the decree for the 44-year-old former actress in a brief hearing at Hawthorne, Nev. during which Miss Peters testifi-: ed that she had been separated* from Hughes, 65, for nearly two. years. "This is not a decision reached in haste and it is dooe. only with the greatest regret,"
